Y the Writings of the Tories and Jacobites, one would think they took their Facts and their Reasonings from Reports made to them in Lapland and Siberia. Their History and their Argument are as different from that of other Englishmen, as if they had been translated out of Rania and Slavonia. There's nothing English in the Manners or Sentiments, but all Rage and Extravagance, as if born out of Confusion, to which it all tends. If a Foreigner should meet with Caleb D'Anvers in one of his Fits, and hear him rave of Bribery, Corruption, and Plundering, would he not be afraid of living or trading in a Kingdom, where the greatest and best Men, for so their Station and Quality must make him think of the principal Persons in it, support themselves by Fraud and Rapine? And would not a Tunisian or Salles Man, be glad to get safe back again among Moors and Corsairs? 'Tis well for the Reputation of our Nation, that the Craftsman is no more understood out of it; for Foreigners would hardly believe, that a Country which produces such Profligates as that Libeller and his Masters, could ever have produced a Sidney and a Locke: And therefore our Pretences to good Principles must, with such Men, be Imposture, and our Depravity and Baseness, Genuine and National. I exult with Joy, when I reflect that this Libel goes no farther than the Bills of Mortality about London, and Nooks and Corners in the Extremities of our own Island, excepting here and there a thatch'd Vicaridge, or the homely Domicil of some boisterous Fox-hunter; for where-ever it could spread, our Infamy must spread with it; and Foreigners who knew any thing of us in the Reign of King William, and the better Days of the Reign of Queen Anne, would, with Hands uplift, cry out, Did the Sumner's, and the Montagues; the Russels, and the Churchills; the Tillotsons, and the Yennifons; the Newtons, and the Clarks; the Miltons, and Addisons, live in the same Country, and so near the same Time with the B's and the P's, the W's and the S's, and the rest of the Faction which delight in Scandal and Mischief, as the Heroes aforementioned delighted in War and Glory, when War was made necessary by the Insults and Outrages of their Neighbours. It will, indeed, much abate their Wonder, when they understand that the B's are the very same Men who betray'd the last Grand Confederacy against the common Enemy, and set on foot a clandestine and ruinous Peace, after a long and almost finished victorious War: That the W's are the Men who not only sunk the deepest in the Mire, of that detested Administration; and when their Measures were broken, by a Providence thrice happy for these Kingdoms, caballed against the Protestant Royal Line, then about to succeed to the Throne; but actually enter'd into Engagements of Treason and Rebellion against it: That the P's are the same sort of Men, who, having out of publick Zeal, ventur'd their Necks to save the Nation from Popery and Slavery at the Revolution, did afterwards, out of private Pique, make almost the same Venture to restore Popery and Slavery, not directly, 'tis true, but as effectually, if they had had their Ends, by joining with Tories and Jacobites in Votes and Addresses, to perplex and weaken the Administration. Their Example has been carefully follow'd by their Successors in Faction ever since; and the Craftsman have refin'd upon their Predecessors, by incorporating Scurrility, Malice and Sedition, with Disguist and Ingratitude: 'Tis well known that even foreign Papists, who are acquainted with the wicked Writings and Practices of the Craftsman, do abhor them as Traytors, not only to the Liberties of their own Nation, Spiritual and Temporal, but to the Liberty of Mankind in these Parts of the World. The Craftsman may probably meet with Admirers at Rome and Albani, there being English Renegades enough to make it pass in those Places; but the People elsewhere, all over Europe, would as soon open a Pack of Wares from an infected Port in the Levant, as a Bundle of Craftsman.

How much honest, and, in Truth, wiser are some Foreign Papists in their Politicks than our Tories and Craftsman, I need not add Jacobites, for they are not to be pass'd. I was, some Weeks ago, in a French Coffee-house, where I perceived two Persons very earnest in Discourse on the Subject, Whether there would be War or Peace? They were both Frenchmen; and, as I was inform'd afterwards, both Papists. The one of them, it seems, argued, That the English could not go into a War on Account of the great National Debt: The other shook his Head, and said, with some Emotion, Les Dettes d'un Etat font des Dettes de la main droite et de la main gauche, &c. i. e. The Debts of a Nation are only Debts of the Right-hand to the Left: The Body is not at all enfeebled by them, if it has the necessary Quantity of Nourishment, and the same be duly distributed. I was before sensible of this Truth, and of the Absurdity of the stale Clamour of our Ruin by the National Debts; but I was pleas'd to hear this same Judgment of them from the Mouth of a Foreigner, and a Frenchman. Is there one rural Squire, Magistrate, or Vicar in a thousand, capable of thinking so justly of the Debts of the Nation, which give so fair a Handle to Opposition, as often as Taxes are on the Carpet, as this Frenchman? If Debts of the Nation are so harmless, and, indeed, useful in France, where the Funds, like all the Edicts, are founded on Car tel est notre Plaisir; how far must they be from proving ruinous or dangerous in England, where the Funds are established upon Bases as strong as the Constitution itself? I could not forbear telling this Incident to a Craftsman of my Acquaintance, a testy ignorant High-Church Bigot, who, taking it to come from a French Protestant, because I repeated Les Dettes, &c. in French, he broke out thus; 'The Hugonot Rascal! Does he pretend to know what Debts of the Nation are better than Mr. D'Anvers, Mr. P—, and the Lord B— he? Have we not been ruined a hundred Times by them, since the Whigs have been in the Ministry, and may we not be ruined by 'em a hundred Times more, if they are hearken'd to? Does such a Rascal as he know these Matters better than all our Patriots who think they can never speak or write enough against the Debts of the Nation within Doors and without? 'Tis pity, continued he, the Kingdom is not clean'd of these outlandish Chatterers! What is their weaving of Silks and Sattins good for, but to pick our Pockets for our Wives and Daughters? I'll say this for High-Church, and a Fig for 'em, they could not endure those Psalm-singing Palatines, Dutch and French, who have always been for the Ministers, ever since the Patriots have been against them. I remember, added he, in the glorious Days of the Utrecht Peace-makers, Mr. F— b brought in a Bill to unnaturalize every Soul of 'em, after the Whigs, in the bad Days of Marlborough and Godolphin, had naturalized them all: For which, and for every thing, the — take them, say I.

Yours, ET CÆTERA.

L O N D O N.

The following Advices came by a Mail Yesterday from Holland, and another from France.

The Letters both from Petersburg and Constantinople, give us Authority to congratulate our Readers on the Pacifick Disposition that is now prevailing among the Mohometan as well as the Christian Powers. For on the 3d Instant an Express arrived at Petersburg from the Governor of Derbent, who assures the Czarina he had certain Advice, that Thamas Kouli Kan, the Persian Generalissimo, had declared to the General of the Turks Army, That being satisfied that he had restored to Persia its ancient Boundaries, he was willing to desist from his Demand of any Reimbursement for the Expences of War, and to agree to a Peace on the Terms propos'd by the Ottoman Porte: That accordingly the two Generals had settled the Preliminaries, by which 'twas agreed amongst others, that the Hostilities should cease; that Kouli Kan should be content with the Restitution of all the Places taken from Persia by the Turks; that Kouli Kan should quit his Pretensions to a Reimbursement for any Expences that had been incurred on account of the War; and that the Prisoners on both Sides should be intirely set at Liberty, immediately after the Exchange of the Preliminaries, without any Ransom, &c. They add, that the same were actually sent away by the Generals of both Armies to their respective Courts, in order for their Ratification, which when exchange'd, the Prisoners would forthwith be released, and the Commerce set open again between the two Nations. — The Courier says moreover, that when he came away from Derbent, a rich Caravan of Merchandise for the Russians, arriv'd there from Ispahan, without having received the least Molestation from the Tartars, who infested the Roads; and that the Factors of the said Caravan highly extol the Persians for the great Civilities they received from them in all the Places they came to. — The Letters from Constantinople, not only confirm the happy Accommodation before-mention'd; but say, that the Porte has sent back the Preliminaries ratified, with the necessary full Powers for drawing up the Articles of the Treaty for a Peace between the two Powers. — A Courier was also just arriv'd at Petersburg from Warsaw, with a satisfactory Answer from the King of Poland, relating to the new Alliance propos'd to his Majesty by the Czarina and the Emperor of Germany.

The Letters from Warsaw give the following Account of the Reception of the Pope's Nuncio Paulucci Merlini, and of his Recognition of the Title of King of Augustus to the Crown of Poland. On the 8th Instant N. S. in the Morning, when he arriv'd at Warsaw, he was received without the Gate by the Palatine of Cracow with the King's Coaches, and conducted to his Palace, and after a magnificent Dinner, he was introduced to the King by the Count de Sulkowsky. On the 17th, which was the Anniversary of the King and Queen's Coronation; the Nuncio, who had only had a private Audience before of their Majesties, had a publick one of the King, in which he congratulated him on his Accession to the Throne; after which he was introduced to the Queen, whom he complimented on the same Occasion. Then the Nuncio and the chief Lords of the Court had the Honour to dine with their Majesties at a Table spread for 26 Guests, while the other Polish Lords and Gentlemen were entertained at two Two Table of the Marshals of the Court, at each of which were 30 Guests. After the Circulation of the State Healths, during which the Guns fired, and the Trumpets and Hautboys play'd, all the Lords and Ladies met at 5 o'Clock in Masks in the Queen's Apartment, where, till 8 o'Clock, there was Gaming, and then a splendid Supper; during which there was a fine Concert of Musick, and at 10 o'Clock a grand Ball was open'd and the Gaming renewed till 2 o'Clock next Morning, when their Majesties retired.

They write from Koningsberg, that King Stanislaus propos'd to set out about the End of the next Month for Metz, there to reside till the general Peace is fully settled; and that the Marquis de Monti, who is released from his Confinement at Thorn, has Orders to repair to Koningsberg, in order to be his Prime Minister.

Four Regiments of Saxon Cuirassiers, two of Dragoons, and one of Foot, are actually marching home from Poland, as is also a Part of the Saxon Artillery. And the Prince of Hesse Homburg is retiring with 17,000 Russians under his Command to the Russian Ukraina; after whose Departure there will then remain in Poland only 8000 Russians under General Bismarck; and 'tis believed, that even these will be gone in April next.

The Dantzickers have the Satisfaction to hear from M. Behn, their Deputy at Warsaw, that the King of Poland's Ministers have declared to him, that their Matter, considering that the Tranquility of his Kingdom is now re-established, consents to restore Fort Weiselmunde to them, and to withdraw his Garison. As this Resolution is, by their said Deputies Confession, partly due to the good Offices of Prince John Adolphus of Saxe-Weissenfels, who always supported the Interests of the Dantzickers at the Polish Court, the Magistrates have made him a considerable Present, and they design another for the Saxon Officer who commands the Garison, when they quit the Place.

Yesterday Mr. Serjeant Eyre had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand, being introduced by the Right Hon.

Hon. the Lord High Chancellor, on his being appointed one of his Majesty's Sergeants at Law. Robert Pauncefort, Esq; being appointed Attorney General, and Richard Hollins, Esq; Solicitor General to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, they had the Honour to kiss his Highness's Hand on Friday last; and Yesterday they were introduced to his Majesty by the Right Hon. the Lord High Chancellor, and had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand on the like Occasion: And we hear that Mr. Hollins will soon be appointed one of his Majesty's Council at Law.

We likewise hear that Mr. Toller of Lincoln's-Inn will be made a Serjeant along with Mr. Fortescue, who is appointed one of the Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, in the Room of Baron Comyns, who is made one of the Judges of the Common Pleas, on the Promotion of Mr. Justice Reeve to be Lord Chief Justice of that Court; and the Lord Chief Justice Reeve, and Mr. Justice Comyns, had the Honour to kiss his Majesty's Hand Yesterday on that Account.

Last Saturday the Right Hon. the Lord North and Guilford, one of the Gentlemen of the Bedchamber to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, was married to the Right Hon. the Lady Lewisham, Relict of the late Lord Lewisham, and Mother of the present Lord, a Minor, aged about 5 Years.

Last Friday a Presentation passed the Great Seal, to enable the Rev. Mr. King, M. A. to hold the Rectory of Collyweston, in the County of Northampton, and Diocese of Peterborough, to which he was lately presented by the Right Hon. the Lord High Chancellor, which Rectoryship became vacant by the Death of the late Rev. Mr. Stanton, M. A.

This Evening, To-morrow, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the Corpse of the late Duke of Buckingham, is to lie in State at his House in St. James's Park, in a Room hung with Velvet within, an Alcove under a Canopy with Feathers, the Coronet, Cap and Cushion, and all the Trophies of Honour being placed round him, with six Mutes attending, and a Page of Honour at the Foot of the Body; several other Rooms, and the Great Hall, will be hung in Mourning, and on Saturday in the Afternoon he is to be interred in King Henry the VII's Chapel in Westminster-Abbey.

This being the Birth-Day of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, who enters into the 79th Year of his Age, his Lordship will give an Entertainment at his Palace at Lambeth to the Nobility, &c. as usual.

Yesterday their Majesties, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the Princesses Amelia, and Carolina, went to the Royal Chapel at St. James, and heard Divine Service performed by the Rev. Dr. Gally, and the Right Hon. the Earl of Morton, one of sixteen Peers of Scotland, carried the Sword of State to and from Chapel before his Majesty.

The Weekly Miscellany of Saturday last, is a Continuation of the Remarks upon the noted Piece, intitled, A Plain Account of the Nature and End of the Sacrament, &c. demonstrating, That the Author is not fit for the Post of Superiority he assumes, in that his Treatise is a thorough Piece of Inconsistency and Self-contradiction.

Advertisement concerning this Book.

This Masterpiece of religious Policy was published, many Years since, in Latin, French, and Dutch: Mr. John Schipper, a Bookseller at Amsterdam, bought one of them at Antwerp, among other Books, and afterwards reprinted it. The Jesuits, being informed that he had purchased this Book, demanded it back from him; but he had then sent it to Holland. One of the Society, who lived at Amsterdam, hearing it said, soon after, to a Catholic Bookseller, by Name Van Eyke, that Schipper was printing a Book which concerned the Jesuits, replied, that if it was only The Rules of the Society, he should not be under any Concern; but desired he would inform himself what it was. Being told by the Bookseller, that it was The Secret Instructions of the Society, the good Father, struggling up his Shoulders, and knitting his brow, said, that he saw no other Remedy but denying that this Piece came from the Society. The Reverend Fathers however thought it more advisable to purchase the whole Edition, which they soon after did, some few Copies excepted; from one of these it was afterwards reprinted, with this Account prefixed; which is there said to be taken from two Roman Catholics, Men of Credit.
